biography

gail fromson

Gail Fromson is a printmaker/mixed media artist born in Winnipeg and currently living and working in Vancouver, Canada. Her formal education is in the fields of interior architecture (B.I.D) and architecture (M.Arch.). In addition to extensive experience as a studio artist, for a decade and a half she taught as a Professor of Design in the School of Design, Faculty of Architecture and Design at Victoria University in Wellington, New Zealand.

Viewing the creative world in an essential and abstract form, Gail uses this reductive approach to create imagined spaces and landscapes. This perspective of the world possibly stems from her formative years on the Canadian prairies, where the most potent co-existence was the expansiveness of the fields and the vastness of the sky. Working in black and white allows her to express the essence of the abstracted image, while colour contributes additional layers and visual textures. Compositional overlays often extend those spatial and ordering dimensions. While the periodic addition of stitching contributes another layering experience, most importantly and basically it returns the work to its integral tactility and materiality.
